

MAURICE HAS JOB AS CORRESPONDENT OF LONDON PAPER

LONDON, May 13.—The Chronicle, announcing Gen. F. R. Maurice, former director of military operations, as its military correspondent, publishes a statement by him pointing out that a newspaper controversy regarding his statements concerning the military is impossible, as proof depends on confidential documents. Maurice, however, reaffirms his statement that he was at the Versailles conference and denies collusion with the opponents of the government.

WASHINGTON BOY SAYS SAMMIES LIKE DRUMFIRE

Howard G. Dunlap, a Washington boy, one of Pershing's veterans, has written his father, Charles Dunlap of the Internal Revenue Bureau of the Treasury Department, that the American boys are growing to like drum fire.

Young Dunlap enlisted in the old Fifth Cavalry at Fort Meyer, June 21, 1913, and went with that outfit to the Mexican border. He was attached to the band of the Fifteenth, but about a year later was sent to Chicago and assigned to recruiting service. While he was on duty in Chicago the Fifth Cavalry was sent to the Philippines. Upon his return to Fort Bliss he was assigned to the Eighth Cavalry. His enlistment was up just at the time this country declared war on Germany, and he re-enlisted.

So eager was he to get into the "big scrap" that he gave up his rank of corporal in the Eighth Cavalry Band and joined the ammunition transport service as a private in Company A, horse section, which was ordered to France in November last.

While on the border young Dunlap won notice as a baseball player, and on the advice of his parents, who now live at Riverdale, Md., he refused to let several teams in the Texas League purchase his release from the army, so that he might become a professional player.

GODSOL ATTORNEYS TO DECIDE TODAY ON THE NEXT MOVE

The next move in the Godsol case, in which Justice Hitts yesterday denied a petition for the dismissal of the complaint, will probably be decided today at a conference of the attorneys for the man who has been in the District Jail since March 6, accused of illegally obtaining millions of dollars from the French government.

There are two courses open—one to proceed to the hearing of the facts and the determination of whether he shall be extradited, and the other the application for a writ of habeas corpus, in which proceeding review would be given to the ruling of the court denying a motion to quash the complaint. Should the latter course be pursued and the case carried along through the courts, it will be months and perhaps years before the final disposition of the case is determined.

Godsol's Statement.

Regarding Justice Hitts' ruling of yesterday, both Godsol and his attorneys issued statements last night. Godsol said:

"I have no comment to make further than that I am surprised at the decision, more especially as the District attorneys admitted in open court that no misrepresentation was made by me to France, and that France did not act on any misrepresentation. The argument advanced by the prosecution that a misrepresentation was made to the Pierce-Arrow Company is nullified by officers of that company, who have stated under oath that no misrepresentation of any kind was ever made to them."

Bailey Disappointed.

Ex-Senator Joseph Bailey, who with W. J. Lambert, J. J. Darrington, and B. Stanchfield, of New York, is attorney for Godsol, said:

"I am, as a matter of course, disappointed, and I will add that I am quite as much surprised as I am disappointed. The judge's decision does not change my opinion of the law in the least. I was never more confident of anything in my life than I am that under the laws of France, as declared by the Supreme Court of every state which has passed upon the question, the complaint was fatally defective; and unless I am thoroughly ignorant of the law, it will be so declared by the higher courts."

District Attorney Lasky declined to make any comment on the ruling of the court, but stated that he had asked the attorneys for the defense to meet him in Justice Hitts' court tomorrow morning for the purpose of having the court fix a date for the hearing of the evidence in the case.

The large auditorium of the Central High School will be the scene tonight of the second big oratorio event of the season when the Oratorio Section of Washington, under Sydney Lloyd Wrightman, founder and director, presents "Eliah."

The oratorio has been arranged for the benefit of the music-loving public, and there will be no charge for admission. A silver collection will be taken, however, and after the actual working expenses of the performance have been deducted, the money will be turned over to the Red Cross.

The chorus now numbers 400 voices. The soloists include George O'Connell, tenor, of Chicago, whose splendid voice was greatly enjoyed here recently in one of our local concerts. The other soloists are Nella Craig, soprano; Mary Jacobs, contralto, both soloists of the Church of the Covenant, and Charles Trowbridge, tenor, bass soloist of All Souls Church. The double solo quartet, the quartet, and the trio will be sustained by Nella Craig, Jewell Downes, and Mrs. R. H. Stone, soprano; Mary Jacobs, Lenore Fuller, and Zell Weaver, contraltos; W. J. Harnhard, Henry Kruger, J. G. Klein, tenors; Wheeler Wilson, Fred East, and Harry Helwig, bass. The accompaniments will be by Harry Murray of the organ and Claude Robinson at the piano.

Congress Did Yesterday What It

The Issue of More Taxes Still "In the Air"—Passage of the Overman Bill in the House—Mr. Cannon's Advice on Co-ordinating Mr. Creel—The Aeroplane Mail Service and Pneumatic Tubes Indorsed by the Senate—Ocean Control Bills and Bills for Controlling Resources on Land—Advantages for the District of Columbia.

By W. V. BYARS.

Secretary McAdoo was forbidden by his physicians to overstrain his mind or body yesterday. This prevented his expected conference with Chairman Kitchen of the House Ways and Means Committee and Chairman Simmons of the Senate Finance Committee. The question of more taxes remained undecided for the day. After it had been reported that Mr. Kitchen had "conferred briefly" with Mr. McAdoo over the telephone it was further reported that he still remained unconvinced of the need for a new revenue bill at this session of Congress.

As far as known the Capitol is unanimously of the opinion that Mr. Kitchen is right and that he ought to stay right. There will be no summer vacations if he does not stand firm. Everybody knows that if Congress begins at this session trying to invent or increase taxes to provide for the appropriations already made and the increases now asked, the session is likely to last until we will be filling the newspapers with disagreeable tax statistics probably throughout the summer, and no one knows how much longer—possibly until the polls are ready to open in November.

In the House yesterday Mr. Fordney of Michigan digressed from the Overman bill into the subject of war taxes, discussing them in considerable variety. He did not nearly exhaust the subject, however. When King John had decided on a policy of No Peace without Victory he had perhaps one of the most effective methods of raising immediate war revenue ever applied in the history of "our Anglo-Saxon civilization." It is related that after getting a sufficient number of revenue producers in prison, he pulled one law tooth at a time from each, until they produced the necessary grand totals to cover all deficits and give a working balance.

Mr. Fordney seemed rather to prefer "consumption taxes." These were recommended by the highest financiers of France as best for war revenue and other purposes because they "plucked the geese so as to give the most feathers with the least squawking." They succeeded so well in Bourbon France that they finally started the guillotine working in the hope of making France safe for democracy by ridding the world of Bourbons. The experiment failed. There are more Bourbons in the world than ever, or we would not now be appropriating money by the ten billions to make it safe for democracy.

Bourbons are excellent men, who will knock you down till you STAY down. Then, if you tell them "Enough," surely they'll treat you quite well. Taking great pains, they will EDUCATE and ELVATE you to serve them—knowing their excellent men—feeling how far they excel.

The House devoted its entire session yesterday to discussing the Overman bill and voting down amendments on it. The strongest of these amendments exempted the Interstate Commerce Commission from "blanket powers" which might be used under the bill to prevent the commission from exerting its power. Congress has given it in the regulation of railroads as "common carriers." It is more than suspected that in his capacity as a "common carrier" Director General McAdoo does not expect to be regulated at all by the commission while he remains on a war basis. This amendment, offered by Mr. Walsh and approved by some of the ablest members of the Congress, was voted down, 213 to 87. The bill itself passed by a vote of 205 to 2. Mr. Gillette of Massachusetts and Mr. Sterling of Illinois cast the two rational votes.

Hon. Nicholas Longworth of Ohio and the House of Roosevelt, went on record against the "blanket power" of the bill. He made quite an able argument but no impression. Former Speaker Cannon took no pains to make an able argument, but he did make an impression when he said he would vote for the bill, regardless of amendments. He then told a number of anecdotes of Peter Cartwright, and other famous pioneer characters, which resulted in having his time extended every time it expired in the middle of an anecdote.

He did not score his greatest triumph, however, until he told the House how he would like to "co-ordinate" Mr. George Creel, Director of Publicity. "If I wanted to give any advice to this Administration," he said, "I would say: Take Creel by the seat of the breeches and the nape of the neck and throw him into space." As the House applied this to Mr. Creel's latest New York comments on Congress, it was sincerely approved. Mr. Treadway introduced a resolution which is intended to find out how far the authority of Congress is superior to Mr. Creel's or otherwise how far Mr. Creel's authority is superior to Congress.

The Senate spent the day on the Post-office appropriation bill, deciding issues on two points most in doubt. The Postmaster General will go on with his aeroplane mail service as far as the hundred-thousand-dollar appropriation and returns of 24 cents an ounce on letters will carry it. As he is authorized to use aeroplanes turned over to him by the War Department, there was a secret fear that a considerable number of aeroplanes might be used for the peaceful purpose of carrying letters in America, which might better be devoted to dropping down enough dynamite in Europe to blow our fiendish foes to fragments.

After Mr. Burleson's opponents had been voted down on aeroplanes, his friends were voted down with equal emphasis on pneumatic tubes. Although he insists that the pneumatic tube service is antiquated and ineffective, little better than junk, the Senate affirmed its amendment to the House bill under which the Postmaster General is to take over and operate the service in six cities, paying not over $4,443,000, in annual installments of $476,000, on a valuation to be fixed by the Interstate Commerce Commission. This is said to be a great bargain, but as the Postmaster does not want the tubes at any price his last chance against them now lies in House support in conference against the Senate.

Mrs. H. W. H. Strong, of the Los Angeles Chamber of Commerce, appeared before the House Committee on Water Power to ask that the Grand Canyon and the Colorado river flowing through it be specially excepted from the condition of the new water power bill and left free for development as soon as she thinks are practically unlimited possibilities. As the canyon is about a mile deep at times, she thinks that dams along its 150 miles' length may produce "new Niagaras" with electricity enough from them to electrify the Southern transcontinental railroad as soon as we think are practically unlimited possibilities. In the meantime she is uncompromising in her opposition to tying up these opportunities under fifty-year leases.

"Leases may be for indeterminate periods," at the discretion of the Secretary of the Interior under the "oil lands leasing bill," favorably reported yesterday by Mr. Ferris from the Committee on "Public Lands," which has worked very hard in perfecting the bill. As it applies to oil, coal, and phosphates, the values involved reach hundreds of millions. The lease system, determinate or indeterminate, characterizes the bill. The best form is a twenty-year lease, renewable by ten-year periods, but its application is limited. The bill has so many valuable and so many doubtful features that we ought to try to decide these great issues of our future of possible peace during a war period when the question it raises is of whether nothing except war can be made to seem important.

The Alexander bills will be favorably reported to the House today from the Committee on Merchant Marine. They are for our ocean business as a whole what the "McAdoo railroad control bill" was to land transportation. If introduced last December they would have made a sensation. Now they are taken for granted as part of the routine.

Amendments by Senator Gallinger to the District of Columbia appropriation bill are intended to give $40,000 for a new site for the Industrial Home School, $24,860 for free dental clinics in public schools and salaries of $950 a year for ten public school librarians. Mr. Gallinger also wishes to donate "Reservation 129" for a public playground. The Vice President reported that the District Commissioners need $275,000 more than they expected.

PARADE TO OPEN RED CROSS DRIVE HERE SATURDAY

Preparations went forward today for the parade of Red Cross officials and workers here Saturday afternoon as the opening gun in the campaign in the District to raise $500,000 next week for the war service funds of the organization.

Melvin C. Hazen, the chairman of a special committee which will arrange the details of the parade, today conferred with Red Cross leaders regarding the divisions of the procession. The uniformed corps, uniformed auxiliaries and other workers will march as separate units, headed by the women's volunteer corps of motor ambulance drivers.

There are 25,000 members in the District chapter of the Red Cross, and efforts will be made to have a large representation in the march from the organized body in the District. Out-of-town workers, on temporary duty here, will also take part.

The parade committee will announce the route tomorrow. It promises to be the most beautiful parade seen in Washington in months, according to Henry B. P. MacFarland, chairman of the war relief fund of 1918.

The parade will be only one of the incidents to the campaign which starts Monday. Competing teams have been organized to work different sections of the city, and reports will be made at daily meetings.

ROUMANIAN CABINET OUT. ROTTERDAM, May 13.—The Roumanian cabinet has resigned, according to information obtained by the Nieuwe Courant today from German sources. This is not unexpected owing to the unrest and dissatisfaction arising from the peace terms enforced by the Central Empires.

THERE WAS A DAY NOT LONG AGO

When Few Women Used Face Powders, Creams or Cosmetics

Now, almost every woman uses them—and without concealment. It is conceded that she has the right to retain her youthful beauty as long as she can. For this reason many women of unquestionable refinement now use Q-ban Hair Color Restorer to retain the youthful beauty of their hair. If your hair is gray, streaked with gray or faded, you, too, can bring back all its natural color with this simple, harmless preparation. Q-ban is not a dye. You can prove this by trying it on your combings. Dyes will color them, but Q-ban leaves them uncolored. It is a wonderful and delightful toilet requisite which keeps the hair glossy and youthful. Does not stain the scalp, or wash or rub off, and does not interfere with washing or waving the hair. Removes dandruff and keeps the scalp healthy. Easily applied.
